TPT sued for incompetence

A court case held in the Durban High Court this week could, if the plaintiff is successful, set a court precedent that will put the inefficiency of Transnet Port Terminals (TPT) right in the firing line.

Abnormal load specialists, Project Logistics Management (PLM), are suing TPT for costs incurred “due to non-performance involving port operations”.

In this, there was a failure by TPT to load vehicles timeously, and the fact they had to stand overnight meant they incurred demurrage.
